

ABSTRACT

Bortniichuk K.G. The relevance of George world-systems analysis in terms of global social change.

Master's thesis in specialty 8.03010101 - Sociology.

The thesis is devoted to the study of George Derluguian's scientific results macrosociology and its importance for the understanding of global social patterns that are embodied in specific situations. In this paper, based on available jobs of scientist and his ideological teachers (I. Wallerstein, Bourdieu, and others) considering the theoretical basis of the method of world-systems analysis highlights the main trends of modern society in all its multilevel. In the thesis the transformation of the world-system and the challenges it faces in the opinion of George Derluguian. The basic ways of implementing macro social laws (according to world-system analysis G. Derluguian) in everyday life, and their impact on decision-making at the micro level. Based on the available scientific papers identified the importance of world-systems analysis G. Derluguian and prospects of its application to explain the existing world order and to address pressing societal macro problems.