

Sociology of Gender Conflicts.

Gender conflicts have a special place in the diversity of social conflicts. Gender conflicts - conflicts of gender roles and contradictions between expectations and reality in their implementation - are integral attributes of social development. The course will provide an opportunity to identify, diagnose and regulate gender conflicts.

By mastering the content of the course, students will have the opportunity to analyze the historical background and values of gender conflicts, ways of resolving the conflict, based on the latest sociological research. The teacher will provide a comprehensive overview of the diverse approaches to the definition of modern gender conflicts and will characterize the social causes of their occurrence and features of manifestation in various areas.

The main tasks of studying the credit module " Sociology of Gender Conflicts" are:

- to form an idea of the conceptual sociological approaches that underlie the theory of gender conflict;
- to form an idea of the basic terms and concepts of gender sociology;
- to form an idea of the features of the formation of theories of gender socialization as one of the sources of gender conflicts;
- to identify the specifics of sociological analysis of the role and place of feminism in the process of forming gender issues;
 - to analyze the system of gender relations in society;
- to model algorithms of their behavior in order to ensure the effective implementation of gender rights and opportunities;
- to implement in practice modern strategies for regulating gender conflicts in society;